Historical/Biographical Notes

Drumlin Farm in Lincoln, Massachusetts, is the headquarters of the Massachusetts Audubon Society, and includes approximately 215 acres of former woods, fields, and farmland, which is today primarily wildlife habitat and an educational resource for the Society. Most of the land comprising Drumlin Farm was acquired after 1905 by Louise Ayer Gordon, later Louise Ayer Hatheway. Gordon Hall, constructed in 1913-1914, was the summer home of the Gordons. By the 1920s the 215 acre parcel, comprised of a number of former farms, orchards, etc. was complete.

Following the death of Donald Gordon in 1923, Louise Ayer Gordon subsequently married Conrad P. Hatheway of Lincoln.

Louise Ayer Gordon Hatheway died in 1955 at the age of 79. She willed Gordon Hall and the 215 acres of property to the Massachusetts Audubon Society. Gordon Hall is today the headquarters building of the Society.

Scope and Content

The collection comprises research notes on land ownership and land use of the 215 acres of properties that make up Drumlin Farm, from the 18th century through the 20th century, compiled by several authors. Included with the collection are copies of copies of deeds, wills, early maps, clippings, and photographs.

The collection is arranged by form and format.
